VALUE OF TACT.

The Art of Knowing How to Smooth Over Rough Places.

Tact might well be called the oil of society. To know how to smooth over the rough places; to adjust the ruffled feathers; to turn the unfortunate re-mark; to seperate the flint and steel, and bring together the oil and wick, thereby producing a pleasant light in-stead of spasmodic sparks, is a grace to thereby producing a pleasant light instead of spasmodic sparks, is a grace to be cultivated. The grace of tact, like the genius of poetry, can be wooed and won, but is never quite so successful as when it is a birthright. How delightful it is to meet the people who never showed their angles, and have cushions ready to hide their neighbor's angles at a moment's notice! Those persons who bring out the neighbor's tender spot, who drag unfortunate subjects of conversation into the evaning order; persons who make sweeping assertions regardless of the opinion of people present, when nothing is gained by the declaration of opinion, are a nuisance. People who condemnthat which is dear as the apple of the aye to another, and whose condemntation counts for nothing because they know nothing about the subject they condemn, would be annoying if they were worth being troubled about. There is a good deal of selfishness and yet a good deal of selfishness and yet a good deal of wisdom in the summing up of a boarder as to how he gained advantage over his fellows. He said, speaking of the landady's baby:

"The baby is not handsome, I admit. It cries considerable, I allow. But I can't make it any handsomer or improve its temper; therefore I make the best of it. I call it a pretty little darling, a sweet little thing. I make excuses for the noise it makes by saying all children are so. The other boarders laugh at me, but the laugh is one my side when they are sawing away at tough round steak, and I am luxuriating on tenderloin. It doesn't take much effort to smooth over the rough places of life."

And it's worth while trying. It certainly shows a wiser suirit to make the

of life."

And it's worth while trying. It certainly shows a wiser spirit to make the rough places easier for ourselves and our neighbors than to make them harder by making them more prominent. It shows a more gracious spirit to endeavor to keep the sharp corners, the weaknesses in a neighbor's mental make-up out of sight than to bring them. out of sight than to bring them into prominence, to the embarrassment of the company and the shame of the of-fender. Tact is a grape to be desired and cultivated.—Christian Union.

Carrier Pigeons in Europe.

Carrier pigeons have long been an object of attention to the Governments of Germany and France. In this latter country the Minister of War lately directed a census of the carrier pigeons to be made, when it appeared that at Lille there were 8,000, at Roubaix, 15,000; at the little town of Wattrelos, in the Department of the Nord, there are the Department of the Nord, there are 3,000, partly belonging to private individuals, partly to societies who endeavor to improve the quality of the birds. Attention is paid to the birds chiefly in the manufacturing districts of the East and North. In Germany the War Department has 6,000 pigeons. There are about one hundred associations that have about 15,000 birds. Independently of business messages there are frequent. of business messages there are frequent flying matches, and it has been ascerthing matches, and it has been ascer-tained that every year some thousands of pigeons are lost in those matches, or at least never arrive at their destinations or return to their homes.—London

A Thing to Be Avoided.

Don't gush. Avoid extremes, andgush. Don't exaggerate the significance of trifles, don't describe mole bills as mountains. If a raindrop wets your face, don't say the storm was ter-rible; if a person is polite to you, or does you a favor, don't immediately conclude that he adores you and would die for you; if, on the other hand, he seems somewhat uneffusive, don't infer that he hates and would like to kill you. Appreciate all good things, but don't sentimentalize over them. Don't run when walking would be just as well, and probably better; and don't just pour yourself out when, perhaps, it might be just as well to contain yourself. Gush is doubtless enjoyed by an individual here and there who is himself effusive, but by the world in gen-eral it is considered as one of the things be endured with other afflictions.-Watchman.

A Wonderful Cure.—Daniel, Flencher, Esq., Gloucester, Mises., writes: "Nearly five years ago, I was taken sick with a disease regarding which the three physicians who attended me were unable to agree. One of the foremost physicians in Boston called it a tumor of the stomach, and treated me for that, nearly killing me with physic; another, a homesopathic physician, thought I had consumption. When taken sick, I weighted he for pounds. I suffered from a heavy couleh, night-sweats, kidney troubles, etc., and was reduced so rapidly that my physicians gave me up. They were unable to help me in the least. At that thee I weighed but hinety pounds, and had not been able to lie down, but had to sit up in order to breathe. I had been confined to my room for six months, expecting to die. I was so bad at times that I could not allow any one to come into my room, as I could not allow any one to come into my room, as I could not take; nor was I able to walk. I picked up one of your immorandum books on the floor of the hotel where I was boarding, and after reading if I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the first bottle brought me around so that I could walk around the room all day. I soon began to build up, and gained so rapidly that it astosished me. I have taken no other medicine since then, and have used perhaps twenty bottles in all of this medicine. I stopped taking it in August, one year ago. I feel that it has saved my life. I now weigh about 160 pounds, and I think, and my friends with me, that this medicine may my life. It certainly is worth its weight in gold, and I consider is a wondecful remedy from its effect in curing all my allments."
